now assume the council presidency. He said it will also be up to the council to decide if it wants to fill his at-large seat for the remainder of his term, which runs through 2023.

“To the public, I imagine the council would start taking applications for this position to fill it, because it is a decent amount of time, too long I think, but again, I will leave it up to my colleagues,” said Avellaneda. “It is now your court to decide whether or not to fill the position for the unfulfilled year, nearly 14 months.”

Avellaneda thanked his family members for their support over the years, and also noted that he recorded a separate video aimed at thanking the residents and his supporters in Chelsea.

He also had some parting words for long-time clerk to the council Paul Casino, who is retiring at the end of the calendar year.

“I want to say I beat you Paul, I got out of here before you did,” said Avellaneda. “This man has been incredible, he truly has, just to know your way up here and to get things done. He is a straight shooter with no biases, and that is really hard to do with so many characters and personalities up here.”

Several of the councilors praised Avellaneda for his leadership at the helm of the council and expressed surprise that he was stepping down.

“I have served here since I was 23 years old, and you were the only president who gave me an opportunity to lead in some of the most important positions in this body and this government,” said District 5 Councilor Judith Garcia.

Garcia said it’s important to recognize leaders who paved the way for others.

District 2 Councilor Melinda Vega Maldonado also praised Avellaneda for helping her to establish her place in politics.

“It has been an honor and a pleasure to work side by side with you, and you have been a tremendous mentor and coach,” Maldonado said.

Brown remembered when he and Avellaneda ran against each other for the same seat and butted heads in their early days on the council.

“But throughout the years, not only have I grown to have a great respect for your integrity, your workmanship, your willingness and dedication to serve and give, it’s been an honor working with and beside you,” said Brown. “Throughout the last few years, we’ve worked terrifically together and worked tirelessly in support of bringing this city together.”

Councilor-At-Large Leo Robinson, the longest serving member of the council, said he was a little shocked that Avellaneda was stepping down, but understood his priorities.

“You have been a good leader for the city, and you have stepped up and introduced a lot of legislation that has benefitted the city,” Robinson said

SUNDAYS AREN'T FUN ANYMORE

Some years back, amid the Patriots’ long string of success, we wrote that New England fans should enjoy the ride, because it inevitably would come to an end.

We’ve been Pats’ fans since the 1960s, so unlike younger fans, we’ve known many more years of failure than success, which gave us a much-greater appreciation for the Pats’ amazing and unprecedented run of Super Bowl appearances and league titles from 2001-2019.

Societies have worshiped their athletic heroes dating back to the ancient Greeks. In the modern age, sports have served as a form of entertainment that uniquely brings people together, where we can forget ours and the world’s problems, even if it’s for just a few hours each week. In addition, success on the athletic field (or track or arena) is the ultimate meritocracy -- unlike just about every other aspect of our society -- which is why cheaters in sports are so reviled.

The Patriots’ success became part of the local culture, with fans -- and even non-fans -- partaking of game-day parties and tailgating that helped us endure the long fall and winter seasons. Studies have shown that sharing the experience of a successful sports team with friends brings noticeable psychological benefits that last for a couple of days -- and New England fans had almost 20 years of joy.

But New England no longer is the center of the pro football universe. We’re now the ones on the outside looking in, as was the case for so many others for two decades. When the hometown newspaper writes that your 1-3 team can take comfort in the positives after another loss -- well, you know that it’s going to be a long season.

We were listening to the 1960s station on our Sirius XM radio in our car the other day when we heard one of our favorite tunes, Sundays Will Never be the Same by Spanky and the Gang. The lyrics are about a lost love and how their Sundays together were special, but they seem appropriate for New England Patriots fans these days:

Now I wake up Sunday morning
Sunday’s just another day
Sunny afternoons that made me feel so warm inside
Have turned as cold and gray as ashes
As I feel the embers die
Sunday will never be the same

TAKE A FOREST BATH

When we saw a headline about a “forest bath” in an on-line publication the other day, we initially took its meaning literally.

But the article was not about physically bathing in the woods. Rather, it pointed out that there have been some studies which have suggested that spending time in heavily-treed areas can decrease blood pressure and stress and boost overall mood, particularly if there is a stream or lake nearby. Exercising in the woods also has similar unique benefits (which made us recall some of our cross-country runs.)

The article further noted that the sounds and smells of the forest, as well as the chemicals released by trees, can have a calming effect. (Though we assume this does not include the growling of a bear...)

After we read the article, we realized that a “forest bath” simply is a new-agey term for taking a hike in the woods.

Here in New England, the change to the fall season provides us with the ultimate opportunity to take a nice hike. Summer’s humidity is gone and the cool, crisp air is perfect for taking a long walk amidst the splendor of the foliage season.

Although our most-memorable hikes have been in the mountains of northern New England, we don’t have to travel that far to enjoy a forest bath. The nearby Blue Hills, Arnold Arboretum, state parks, and parks under the auspices of the Trustees of Reservations provide many nearby opportunities to enjoy the solitude of nature with our friends and family members.

So whether you call it a hike -- or a forest bath -- we encourage all of our readers to get outside in the coming weeks.

Life changes all the time. Nothing is permanent. The only constant is change.

Hurricane Ian proved again that life is unpredictable and so is the weather. One reminder from Hurricane Ian is that we can’t fight the weather and come out very well. Category four hurricanes are certain to bring devastation and loss of life to what or who is in its path.

Dozens of people in Florida lost their lives to Ian last week. Hundreds of millions of dollars of damage occurred. We can always hope that the weather will not be as bad as forecasted. We can always hope we will hold

BY John Vitagliano

Hurricane’s Ida’s devastating impacts on Florida’s seacoast communities provide a stark warning to Boston which is similarly vulnerable to the combined impacts of storm surges and sea level rise which is universally predicted as inevitable.

Sea level rise is due largely from accelerated melting of the Greenland and Antarctic glaciers and ice sheets from global warming, and to a lesser but significant degree from ocean waters’ expanding volumes due to warming temperatures.

The consequences of sea level rise are ominous for Boston. Currently accepted scientific data indicate that by the year 2050 New England coastal communities will experience an average sea level rise of three to six feet. This would be a catastrophe for East Boston, a peninsula bordered by Boston Harbor and the Chelsea Creek, with a possible flooded area of over 300 acres. Charlestown, the North End and Seaport District would also be severely impacted as would Winthrop and Chelsea. Logan Airport, due to its massive filling of once-out, hang on, and survive but bad weather is a formidable foe.

California fires, Midwest tornadoes, Appalachian flooding and now a gulf coast hurricane proves again that it’s best to get out of the way of mother nature. This often means hurrying to a place of safety depending on the threatening weather.

Hindsight always sees better. It’s easy to say this is what people should have done. We hope that the bad weather won’t be as bad as forecasted. We hang on hoping we will be able to ride out the storm.

The best that we can do is try to stay ahead of dangerous weather if we can. Relocate, or put ourselves in as safe a place as possible is vital.

GUEST OP-ED

Ian – when devastation happens

Ft. Myer’s Beach has been dear for many years. My wife and I have visited there often. We have become very familiar with the very small island that is only about seven miles long. We know some of the people impacted and who are hurting. We can’t imagine how they will ever overcome last week’s horrific hurricane. Some will likely never reopen their businesses or even consider trying to rebuild. Some will try but the climb back to any semblance of normalcy will be long and hard.

Overcoming devastation is never easy, sometimes impossible and at best takes a long time. Your devastation may not be a hurricane. Your devastation may not be weather related. We all must keep in mind that if we live life long enough, we will face some kind of devastation that hurts or even cripples us. Rendering prayer, kindness emotional and financial support is being a good neighbor and treating others the way we hope to be treated when it happens to us.

The consequences of sea level rise are ominous for Boston

borhood of East Boston.

Such an undertaking would not be inexpensive in the short term but would be critical in the long term as protection for the incalculably valuable seaport assets and irreplaceable neighborhoods of Boston. I believe that Massport, created by the legislature in 1956 to be the steward and protector of Boston Harbor assets, including Logan Airport which would be severely impacted by sea level rise to the point of closure, must play a vital role in the underwriting of an effective sea level rise protective system. In 2012 Boston narrowly escaped the massive destruction from Superstorm Sandy, endured by New Jersey and New York, by six hours because the storm struck at low tide instead of high tide. The safety of East Boston, all Boston neighborhoods, and Winthrop as well as the security of the region’s air transportation and maritime infrastructure should not be dependent on a chance tidal occurrence.

A moveable sea barrier system for Boston Harbor would not be precedent setting. Not surprisingly the Dutch have been leading the way in creating and operating real world moveable sea barrier systems. For example, one which has been operating successfully is the Maeslantkering Barrier on the Nieuwe Waterweg, protecting the major cities of Rotterdam and Antwerp from the ravages of storm surge and sea level rise.

Boston is not the only American coastal city facing the inevitability and consequences of sea level rise. Just recently New York and New Jersey have begun reviewing, on the tenth anniversary of Hurricane Sandy’s destruction, a proposal by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to protect their communities from sea level rise and storm surge devastation by constructing a huge gate system consisting of 12 movable sea barriers across New York Harbor. Estimated cost of the New York sea barrier proposal is $52 Billion. While the Boston Harbor proposal would not approach that level

McGovern participates in a conference at EBNHC

On Monday, October 3, Representative Jim McGovern, Congressman for the 2nd District of Massachusetts, visited East Boston Neighborhood Health Center (EBNHC) to hear about food insecurity needs reflected in the 2022 Boston’s Community Health Needs Assessment and to learn more about how EBNHC’s services are helping to promote nutritional equity for local communities.

During the conference, Rep. McGovern lauded EBNHC as a national model in the United States, crediting President and CEO Gregory Wilmot, his administration, and staff for setting the standard to which other health centers should aspire.

East Boston Neighborhood Health Center (EBNHC) serves a diverse, low-income, immigrant population with over 70 percent of patients best served in a language other than English. Service area includes East Boston, Revere, Winthrop, Everett, Chelsea, and Boston’s South End – among the communities hit hardest by the long-term effects of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Across the nation, initiatives are underway aimed at mitigating the mountain of need COVID created for many of these families, including the need for affordable food as prices soar, especially for nutritious fruits and vegetables.

Congressman Jim McGovern has spent decades leading the charge to end hunger in America, working at the local, state, and federal level to fight for change, build awareness, and push for legislation to address policy failures that have created food insecurity. Hearing from community organizations like East Boston Neighborhood Health Center informs understanding on the issue and supports advocacy to promote nutrition equity.

As part of an effort to alleviate food insecurity and maintain the health of its patients, EBNHC cooks and serves more than 2,500 nutritious meals weekly (132,700 per year) for older adults enrolled in home-delivered meals programs through Senior Care Options (SCO) or Program of All Inclusive Care of the Elderly (PACE) programs. The health center also serves an average of 275 families per week through its Community Resource and Wellness Center food pantry.

that facilities conduct a bioassessment of benthic resources and sediment quality.

EPA’s work developing the reissued permits included enhanced outreach to the surrounding communities, provided in multiple languages when the permits were issued as drafts seeking public comment. There was significant public input calling on EPA to mitigate the adverse effects of multiple environmental stressors on the affected communities, including Chelsea, Boston, and Revere. These impacts—including from water and air pollution—are being borne by underserved and overburdened communities and, moreover, are being worsened by extreme weather precipitated by climate change. EPA’s ongoing oversight will ensure that facilities comply with their permits to protect human health and the environment of nearby communities with environmental justice concerns.

EPA intends to continue to engage with community members to address concerns raised on these permits. To better understand these complex cumulative impacts, building on EPA’s recent announcement of a new national office dedicated to advancing environmental justice and civil rights, EPA is working with partners to explore an initiative, to investigate these cumulative impacts in the affected communities. This work requires creating a process that is built with and led by community stakeholders.

Concurrently, EPA has issued a broader policy framework around these permits, outlining its approach to analyzing and considering cumulative impacts, as appropriate, in future permitting and planning actions. If this analysis yields “new information” identifying environmental impacts EPA can address, EPA will consider reopening these permits to propose appropriate modifications, or use the information to inform the next round of permitting. EPA also commits to scrutinize a cumulative impact analysis for evidence of disparate treatment or disparate impact in violation of Title VI of the Civil Rights Act – and commits to a longer-term planning initiative to help mitigate the full range of adverse impacts on communities with environmental justice concerns.

Chelsea River is an urban tidal river flowing from the mouth of Mill Creek, between Chelsea and Revere, to Boston’s Inner Harbor, between East Boston and Chelsea. The river is classified by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts as a Class SB water body, meaning the water quality of the river should be able to support wading, swimming, fishing, boating and a healthy fish and aquatic life community. Chelsea River is considered “impaired” because it is not supporting those uses due to pollutants such as ammonia, dissolved oxygen and petroleum hydrocarbons and conditions such as turbidity, odor and trash/debris.

EPA is also making efforts on transparency and keeping the public informed of these permits. In their SWPPP, each permittee is required to present the factual basis and analysis of actions taken in sufficient detail to allow EPA, the public, or an independent qualified person to evaluate the reasonableness of the decision. The updated permits are available at this website: <https://www.epa.gov/npdes-permits/chelsea-river-bulk-petroleum-storage-facilities-npdes-permits>. The SWPPPs for each facility will be posted on this site each year, along with summary of discharge monitoring data. Additional information is also available to help the public sign up for notifications on any violations, and ways to contact EPA with questions and concerns.

CHS ROUNDUP

HERMAN ESQUIVEL PACES CHS FOOTBALL TEAM TO 36-24 VICTORY OVER EAST BOSTON

Herman Esquivel turned in one of the greatest individual performances in Chelsea High football history to lead the Red Devils to a 36-24 victory over the East Boston Jets Friday evening under the lights at Chelsea Stadium.

Herrman was a force on both sides of the ball. On offense, he scored four touchdowns and a two-point conversion en route to accumulating 226 yards on 18 carries.

The senior captain, who stands at 5'-8" and 165 pounds, also was a stalwart for the CHS defense, accounting for 15 tackles on the night, the fourth straight game in which he has made 15 tackles or more for coach Michael Jackson's Red Devils.

The contest was a slugfest in the trenches, with East Boston attempting just one pass (which was intercepted) and CHS quarterback Duane Davis throwing four times with two completions for 73 yards. Davis also ran twice for 15 yards.

The visiting Jets drew first blood, scoring a touchdown on their opening drive that consumed six minutes of the first quarter.

However, Chelsea struck back quickly. Jaiven Diaz hauled in a 44-yard pass reception to the Eastie 20, from where Esquivel took over, punching the ball into the end zone on two carries.

The Red Devils never yielded the momentum thereafter. After making a defensive stop on fourth down at midfield, Chelsea marched from just inside its own territory, with Esquivel lugging the ball for the entire drive and then making the two-point conversion for a 16-8 Chelsea lead.

Jackson then called for an onside kick by CHS kicker Alex Cano. Red Devil Jhostin Salmeron put a nice hit on the Jet who first got to the ball, causing the pigskin to come loose. In the ensuing scrum, Jhostin came out of the pile with the ball.

The next drive, starting from about the 40 yard line, began with a reverse by the fleet Ali Warsame that netted 32 yards to the EB eight, from where Esquivel once again scored on three carries.

East Boston got the ball back with four minutes left in the half and marched to the Red Devil 10 yard line. However, the Chelsea defense bent, but didn't break, thanks to an interception on third down by Jaiven Diaz at the pylon, with Jaiven running the ball out of the Sen. Sal DiDomenico (third from right) is shown with other attendees at the White House Conference on Hunger, Nutrition, and Health.

DiDomenico, an Anti-Hunger Champion, invited to White House Conference

On September 28, Senator DiDomenico was invited to the first White House Conference on Hunger, Nutrition, and Health in over 50 years. During the summit, President Biden announced an ambitious goal of eliminating hunger and tackling diet-related and preventable diseases in the United States by 2030. Senator DiDomenico has prioritized expanding access to nutritious food and combatting food insecurity for the entirety of his Senate career and has helped create food and nutrition programs in Massachusetts that are now being pointed to as ideas the rest of the country should adopt.

“I was honored to be invited to join leaders from across the country for this historic White House Conference on Hunger, Nutrition and Health,” said Senator DiDomenico, Assistant Majority Leader of the Massachusetts Senate. “In a country so rich with resources we need to end hunger and expand access to nutritious foods throughout the nation. I am thrilled to hear that President Biden and his administration are now making it a priority to achieve these goals this decade. I look forward to building on the many cutting-edge anti-hunger programs we have launched in Massachusetts until we end hunger entirely.”

During the conference, President Biden outlined his administration’s strategy for ending hunger and addressing diet-related diseases. The strategy calls for expanding access to nutrition assistance programs and launching new programs to cover tailored meals.

Many of the nutrition assistance program ideas in the federal government’s plan were piloted in Massachusetts first and championed by Senator DiDomenico. These include expanding school meals to all students, expanding access to SNAP benefits, and providing food to children in the summer months when school is not in session.

Over the past 12 years, Senator DiDomenico has successfully brought many other programs to the Commonwealth that have expanded access to nutritious foods for all families, regardless of income. After advocating for 8 years, Senator DiDomenico helped create a common application this year which allows Massachusetts residents to simultaneously apply for several public benefits, including SNAP benefits, with one common application. DiDomenico also secured increased funding for food banks across the state, increased cash assistance for low-income families with children, and for families in deep poverty.

The White House Conference made it clear that these programs have both helped countless residents in our state and demonstrated that Massachusetts is a national leader on tackling food and nutrition insecurity. Senator DiDomenico will continue to work with colleagues and advocates to advance legislation that will help meet President Biden’s goal.

Sheriff’s Department warns of scam

The Suffolk County Sheriff’s Department is issuing a warning to Massachusetts residents about an elaborate scam being attempted by people impersonating Department employees.

In one reported case, a woman received a telephone call from a man falsely identifying himself as “Chief Deputy Alphonso Johnson from Civil Process.” The caller then told his potential victim that she was in contempt of court for failing to appear for jury duty and she would need to pay a stated amount of $625.00 to settle a bond so that they can close the matter. The scammer also told the woman that she would need to pay in the form of prepaid credit cards.

While many people believe that they could never be the victims of such a seemingly obvious attempt at deception, the perpetrators of this crime are continuously updating and enhancing their methods to convince their intended targets. Scammers are now using equipment and software that “spoofs” the telephone numbers of actual businesses and organizations, so that it appears on Caller ID that the caller is actually from the place that they are claiming to be from.

In an additional attempt to enhance the caller’s appearance of authenticity, the scammer created a fake “Summons for Jury Duty” form with the intended victim’s name and current address printed on it, marked with a date that has already passed, indicating the date that the scammer claims their intended target failed to report for jury duty.

In past scams, callers have even asked their intended victims to purchase prepaid credit cards and bring them to the front of the Department’s Civil Process building.

Once again, the Department wants to emphatically reiterate that it does not call to collect money and, if anyone should receive a call resembling the examples given above, they are advised not to give out any personal information and to call their local police department to report the caller. Above all, they should not, under any circumstances, take out money and go to meet these callers at any location, nor should they wire or send any money or other form of currency.

The Department also asks that you call the Suffolk County Sheriff’s Department’s Investigative Division at: (617) 704-6514. You may also reach the Suffolk County Sheriff’s Department Civil Process Division at: (617) 704-6999.

endzone as time expired.

Chelsea received the kick-off to start the second half, with Anthony Cortave making a nice return from his 30 to the Eastie 35.

However, an interception by the Jets in their red zone was returned all the way to the Chelsea red zone, opening the door for an East Boston comeback. The Jets scored on three plays and, with the two-point conversion, drew within 22-16.

However, the Red Devils -- led by their captain, Esquivel -- stormed back with a 60-yard drive to make it a two-score game, 28-16.

The Jets refused to quit and fought back with another TD drive to close the gap to 28-24.

However, the unstoppable CHS offense, with Esquivel leading the charge, scored with six minutes left in the contest to put the game out of reach for the 36-24 finale.

In addition to Diaz's interception and Esquivel's 15 tackles, other key players on defense for Chelsea were Tommy Santana, who had two tackles for a loss and a sack, and Salmeron, who had a sack and two tackles for a loss.

In addition to Esquivel's exploits, other key contributions to the CHS offense came from Warsame, who ran for 49 yards on two carries, and Diaz, who had two receptions for 73 yards, bringing Jaiven's total to just over 400 yards receiving on the season.

Jackson and his crew will seek their second win of the season when they trek to the Manning Bowl to face Lynn English tomorrow (Friday) evening. The opening kickoff is set for 7:30.

CHS CROSS COUNTRY TEAMS TOP CLASSICAL

The Chelsea High boys and girls cross country teams defeated Greater Boston League rival Lynn Classical last Wednesday on the Red Devils' home course at Admiral's Hill.

The boys cruised to an 18-42 victory led by Alex Flores, who crossed the line in first place in a personal record (PR) time of 19:51.

The full results for the Red Devils -- their places and times -- were as follows:

1. Alex Flores 19:51
2. Alejandro Zepeda 20:16
4. Nate Nadow 20:23
5. Kyle Leong 21:41
6. Austin Freeman 23:26
7. Jose Amaya 23:29
11. Heriberto Dejesus 27:37
13. Jimmy Merino 29:41

On the girls' side, Gizelle Rodriguez outraced the field with a clocking of 21:43. The scoresheet for the Lady Red Devils was as follows:

1. Gizelle Rodriguez 21:43
2. Darily Sanchez 24:31
4. Holly Hatleberg 29:08
5. Iyssis Henderson 35:06

"I loved to see Alex hit another PR," said first-year CHS head coach Reagan von Wildenradt. "He and Alejandro worked well together up front for most of the race, and Nate had another awesome race to get inside the top five for the boys. Kyle Leong had an amazing performance, as did Jose Amaya.

"I'm really proud of Gizelle for picking up another win on the girls' side," von Wildenradt continued. "Holly, Darily, and Iyssis all looked strong and consistent in the race.

"We're looking forward to having one last shot digs. Alondra Rodriguez also made a big contribution to the winning effort with four aces, five assists, and five digs.

This past Monday, the Red Devils won their third straight with a 3-0 shutout of Somerville 3-0. Among the highlights in the victory were the play of outside hitter Jasmine, who tallied seven kills; setter Rileigh, who provided 13 assists; middle blocker Yareliz Gonzalez, who added three kills and four aces; outside hitter Tatiana who accounted for 10 kills, three aces, and eight digs; and Libero Guiday-sis, who had eight digs and four aces.

Coach Gabriel Morales and his crew have a busy week ahead with four matches in seven days: The Red Devils are scheduled to host Everett today (Thursday) and travel to Malden tomorrow (Friday). They will have a rematch at undefeated Revere on Monday and will entertain Medford next Wednesday.

CHS VOLLEYBALL TEAM WINS THREE STRAIGHT

The Chelsea High volleyball team rolled to three impressive victories this past week against a trio of Greater Boston League opponents.

The Red Devils defeated Lynn English 3-1 in a contest that was highlighted by some superb individual performances. Outside hitter Jasmine Varela served an outstanding 11 aces, along with making six digs and three kills. Setter Rileigh Connors had 12 assists and three aces. Outside hitter Tatiana Sanabria delivered 11 kills and five aces and Libero Guidaysis Castro made 14 digs.

In a 3-1 triumph over Lynn Classical, Connors set 16 assists for her teammates. Varela once again turned in an impressive two-way performance from her outside hitter post with 10 kills and 10 digs, as did fellow outside hitter Sanabria with 10 kills, nine digs, and four aces.

Castro, the Red Devils' Libero (the defensive specialist position) made 11 on our home course this Thursday," said the coach, referring to today's final home meet of the season at Admiral's Hill vs. GBL rival Lynn English.

The Red Devils will travel down the Parkway to Torbert Macdonald Park to take on Medford next Wednesday.

CHS BOYS SOCCER TOPS CLASSICAL

The Chelsea High boys soccer team overcame a tough start -- the Red Devils yielded a goal to rival Lynn Classical in the opening minute -- but roared back to claim a 7-2 triumph over their Greater Boston League rival this past Monday at Chelsea Stadium.

"This was the worst start you could imagine after a two game losing streak," noted CHS assistant coach William Estrada. "We conceded a goal in less than a minute. This is not what we wanted."

However, the Red Devils were not deterred by the quick tally by the visiting Rams and Chelsea soon took control of the contest.

"Even after that goal, we played well," noted Estrada, "so there was no reason for us not to win this game."

The Red Devils brought the contest back to level at the 25-minute mark when captain Jefferson Ruiz crossed the ball on a corner kick, which found its way into the back of the net after taking a heavy bounce in the box.

"The Lynn Classical defender tried to clear the ball off the line, but luckily for us, he was unsuccessful," said Estrada of the goal, which was credited to Jefferson.

Before the end of the half, midfielder Kevin Garcia passed the ball over the top that took a bounce at the edge of the box, from where Ever Aguilar scored on a half-volley to give Chelsea a 2-1 lead at the intermission.

Moments into the second half, a Lynn Classical defender was about to clear the ball, but the opportunistic Ruiz stuck out a foot as the ball bounced. Jefferson delivered a shot across the goal, low to the right of the Ram keeper, for his second goal of the game.

Not long after, Red Devil Jose Joj made it a 4-1 contest when he received the ball on the right hand side from defender Olvan Mendez. Jose struck a powerful shot from a tight angle. Though the Classical keeper got a hand on the ball, there was too much power on it and he was unable to make the save.

For the fifth CHS goal, Steven Gamez crossed the ball into the box where Wander De Pina was able to head it into the back of the net.

After the Rams cut the gap to 5-2, Jose "Smiley" Melendez, who was playing as a left defender at this point of the game, sent the ball perfectly ahead for Ruiz as Jefferson was running at full speed.

Ruiz dribbled the ball past the goalkeeper and delivered it into the back of the net for his third goal of the game to attain the hat trick.

Senior Angel Rosales applied the coup de grace for Chelsea when he found himself alone in the box and sent in a nice shot. The LC keeper made the save, but the ball landed at Ruiz's feet. Jefferson passed it back to Angel, who this time sent the ball into the back with a one-time strike for his first goal of the season.

In the Red Devils' match earlier in the week vs. Malden, a 2-0 loss, Chelsea conceded two goals in the first half, with both of the Golden Tornadoes' goals resulting from defensive mistakes.

CHS head coach Mick Milutinovic made some adjustments at the intermission and the Red Devils played well enough to turn things around and not concede for the rest of the game.

Milutinovic and his crew are scheduled to play at Somerville today (Thursday) and at Excel Academy on Saturday morning. They will play at Everett on Tuesday and host Lynn English next Thursday.

decision to Greater Boston League rival Malden this past week, CHS head coach Randy Grajal was pleased with his team's overall performance.

"We were missing some key pieces in that game, as three of our captains were not able to play because they were recovering from injuries or were sick," said Grajal. "The team continues to work looking for our first victory. This season has brought a lot of different challenges, but I am pleased with our team chemistry where all the players are working to get better and supporting each other.

"There are some games ahead in our schedule that we are looking forward to playing, as our team keeps improving and we are hopeful we will be able to manage a few victories," Grajal added.

Grajal and his crew are scheduled to host Somerville today (Thursday). They will entertain Everett Tuesday and trek to Lynn English next Thursday.

Although the CHS girls soccer team came up on the short end of a 5-0
